The Two Circuses.

The vaulting and acrobatic performances of Nathans & Co.'s circus were good. The few cages of animals needed turning loose in a forrest to cut down unnecessary expenses. The menagerie of O'Brien's was larger and better. The circus performance was tip-top-particularly the vaulting and acrobatic performances. The employes of O'Brien's were a sober, orderly and manly set of fellows, and were much praised by our citizens for their deportment in saving the distressed women and children from the fallen tents and the drenching storm.

Old Dan Rice.

OLD Dan Rice, the oldest legitimate circus man in the world, was in Cynthiana with Nathans' show, and called at the Democrat office. He informed us that his son-in-law, Charlie Reid, a Maysville boy, is now performing his unequaled feats of horsemanship in Copenhagen, Denmark, at $250 a week. Mr. Rice says he trained the elephant Empress, with O'Brien's show, and speaking about elephants he said no doubt Barnum's great elephant, Jumbo, was a great curiosity, as a large man could walk erect between the monster's legs. There is only one larger in the world, and that one is owned by the Russian Government. Jumbo was bought by Barnum for $7,000. He is perfectly docile. Mr. Rice has been in every country on the globe, and says he feels at home nowhere more than in Kentucky. He started in the show business at Galena, Ill., where General Grant once worked for him at fifty cents a day .- [Cynthiana Democrat.

John O'Brien's Circus Tribulations.

The meeting closed in most of the day here Saturday footing up his losses real and imaginary, with a view of bringing suit against the K. C. road for damages. He will allege in his petition that had he been landed here two hours earlier Friday morning, his afternoon's performance would have been correspondingly earlier in the afternoon, and would have been over before the storm struck tents, which would have been lowered for the contingency. He will also petition for damages by loss of the two 's a kind of a "Huckleberry Hell"in engagements at Richmond, alleging that his train was unnecessarily detained here and a rounds, where they sell cider, cor- collision was brought about which could ndy peaches, run cap guns, shake have been averted. John O'Brien's Circus Tents Blown Down, and 2,500 Men, Women and Children Crawl out in a Half Drowned Condition into a Blinding Rain Storm.

Friday afternoon at half past four o'clock, a small cyclone accompanied by torrents of rain and hail struck the tents of John O'Brien's circus during the latter part of the performance, and the huge tents of the circus, menagerie and all the side shows were blown flat to the ground. The performance was being witnessed by about 2,500 people, and as if by miraculous powers, all escaped rail just in time to get his head cut clear off. with their lives, and but few sustained serious injuries. Weekly Review of the Louisville Leaf To bacco Market.

The receipts were 740 hogsheads, against 910 last week, and 670 in the corresponding week of 1882. The market has displayed a healthy activity throughout the week, and values have inclined to sellers' favor. The cessation of free deliveries from the country has been unusually abrupt, and with receipts growing smaller by degrees and contimally less, estimates of the country reserve have been undergoing revision. The actual supply has not equaled the wants of the home and foreign trade, and buyers have competed with each other with more spirit. It is considered probable that this tendency will continue for the present, and that the surplus of the last crop will be very small. Burley tobaccos have not developed material changes in price, but all grades have sold more or less fuller. Dark and heavy styles of all sound descriptions have been very active, and, with occasional irregularities, have tended up. Clarksville leaf and lugs have sold at better prices. Rehandlers have been competing more actively for dark and heavy leaf of most grades with regie buyers and other shippers, and limits are 3)@40c. higher than a fortnight ago. The crop appears to be doing very well with a few local exceptions. We quote new crop tobaccos as follows:

The Importance of Good Water For Cattle.

In purchasing a pasture the value of a never failing supply of good water should not be overlooked, for good feed with bad water is not much better than poor feed with good water. A small pond fed by surface drainage is always muddy and otherwise very impure, besides being often low if not entirely dried up. A good spring on a side hill makes a very desirable drinking place for both man and beast; but the best water is a constantly running stream of good water; this cannot always be had; but when a pasture is found that has such a stream running through it it adds very much to its value, more than either buyers or sellers usually consider it; therefore when one is in search of a pasture and finds one with a good stream running through it, he will be very likely to be able to buy it for less than its real value. In such pastures the cattle will not only have a constant supply of good water but the land on either side of the stream will furnish feed that is always acceptable during the dry portion of the season. The owner of such pastures is saved the trouble of looking after the supply of water and the labor of cleaning out the pond several times in the season, as he is often compelled to keep up the supply. When cows are obliged to depend on a surface fed pond for water they often get a short supply, and the owner does not know it until the cows fail to give the usual supply of Milch cows are often compelled to drink water made thick with mud and slime, because their owners fail to give the surject of water their attention which its importance demands. Farmers should not forget to make frequent examinations of the water supply for their cattle.

In localities where there are hills one or two hundred feet high, if there are not natural springs that come to the surface, it is in most places so situated very easy to dig a well half way up the hill, and put a pipe in it to lead the water into a tank located down the hill, where it will be below the bottom of the well. In this way a constant supply of pure water can be obtained at a trifling expense, except the labor. On level land this cannot be done, but where a Union Telegraph Company, is an Ohi herd of fifteen or twenty cows are kept | man, who began at the bottom of the it will pay to dig a well and pump the ladder and was once on a country newswater up with a good windmill. The advantages thus gained over poor water would soon pay for both the well and mill.-Massachusetts Ploughman.

Mulching Winter Wheat. The Elmira (N. Y.) Farmers' Club

discussed the subject of mulching winter wheat a few weeks since. One member said he had found a thin mulching of buckwheat straw to give a good result. Another said the only object was protection from the rigors of winter, and that it was to be performed any time before the ground freezes, or even after, but not before the plants had made some growth. The President thought the straw mulch worth more even to the grass seeding than to the wheat. He had found it very useful for winter rye. In many localities the past winter the absence of snow caused much exposure of wheat to the sweep of winter winds, and the extensive winterkilling was owing to this cause. A striking case of the advantage of straw mulching occurred some years ago under our observation. The kind sown was the old Mediterranean, which was not so hardy as some other sorts. As there was a surplus of straw on the farm, the tenant was directed to spread it thinly over the wheat field as soon as the ground was frozen hard enough to bear the team and wagon, so as not to cut in and injure the crop. He applied one load, but, having no confidence in its utility, did not continue the mulching. The straw was spread just thick enough partly, not wholly, to hide the wheat from view. A slight subsequent thaw caused it to adhere to the soil. The winter had but little snow, and the wheat crop generally was badly exposed and greatly injured. But where the load of straw was spread and the thin mulching given, the protection was so efficient that it was quite uninjured, and it yielded by estimate at the rate of twenty bushels per acre. On the exposed part the winter killing was so severe that an average of no more than five bushels per acre was obtained, and some of it was not worth cutting. This was an extreme case, and not likely to occur to such an extent again; but when the straw is on hand the benefit of spreading it in any case would doubtless pay for the labor, and much further advantage may follow in open winters. Grab Worms and the Crops.

The white grub worm seems to be proving more and more disastrous to the growing crops from year to year, and its depredations are far. more disastrous than the farmers themselves are cognizant of. In many parts of the country the corn crop suffers enormously each year and at an increasing ratio, and while the results are more apparent in this crop than in most others, the small grains, and especially the grass crop, suffer greatly. The presence of these quiet subterranean workers is not apparent to the casual observer, and the farmers generally look for some other cause to explain the dwarfed condition of crops upon lands with all the conditions of soil, culture and climate favorable to produce best results, yet which fail on account of this pest. There is hardly a field anywhere which is entirely free from them.

Any one able to offer a successful plan, for the eradication of this disastrous depredator will prove himself a benefactor to the agriculturist. Hogs will root them up; but even if it were possible for them to perform the work on a farm, the "cure," oftener than otherwise, proves more disastrous than the "disease." When barn yard manure is plentiful enough to greatly enrich the land, that will furnish food for the grubs exact in regard to her age, in regard to instead of the roots of the crops. An abundant application of salt would no doubt be effectual, but would at the same time be the destruction of the crops.-Western Rural.

Should Women Ride Like Men?

The above subject having created considerable discussion in the English newspapers, the Lancet (London) now fingers kept in exact parrallelisms—it is takes it up and concludes that it would be as well to leave the determination of the question to those whom it principally concerns. We fancy they have no wish to change the custom. As a matter of fact, although it may not appear to be the case, the writer continues, the seat which a woman enjoys on a sidesaddle is fully as secure, and not as irksome, as that which a man has to maintain, unless he simply balances himself and does not gripe the sides of his horse either with the knee or the side of the leg. It is curious to note the different ways in which the legs of men who pase much time in the saddle are affected. Riding with a straight leg and a long stirrup almost invariably produces what are popularly called knock-knees. Nearly all the soldiers of the British army suffer from this deformity, as any one who will take the trouble to notice the men of the Life Guards and Blues walking may satisfy himself. On the other hand, riding with a short stirrup produces bowed-legs. Jockeys, grooms, and most hunting men who ride very frequently are more or less bow-legged. The long stirrup rider gripes the horse with his knee, while the short stirrup rider gripes him with the inner part of the leg below the knee. This difference of action explains the difference of result. No deformity necessarily follows the use of the side saddle if the precaution be taken with growing girls to change sides on alternate days, riding on the left side one day and on the prought out a lunar rainbow that right the next. The purpose of this change is to counteract the tendency to the solar article, as the colors were diflean over to the side opposite that or ferent, yellow predominating.—Oswege which the leg is swung.

TELEGRAPHIC MATTER

Our latest correspondence, May 16, 1833, brings to ar the narrative of HENRY B. INGRAM, the General Son erintendent of the District Messenger Co. of New Haven, Conn. Mr. Ingram says: "For many months I had been sorely troubled with a weak and tired feeling across the loins, almost invariably accompanied with a headache. I had noticed also that at stated per ods following these pains my urine would be highly colored, and leave a heavy brick-colored sediment when allowed to stand in the vessel. I could not work, and I was discouraged to an alarming degree. Nothing helped me. I was prescribed for by some of the best physicians in New York City, where I was located at that time, but derived no benefit or relief. When almost ready to give up in despair an acquaintance said to me, 'I want you to try Hunt's Remedy.' I did so, and hardly twenty-four hours had elapsed before I obtained relief, and in three weeks' time all the aforesaid ailments had disappeared, and I improved steadily, and was infused with new life, so that I could resume my business again. which is one that subjects me to strains of all kinds, which are likely to affect the kidneys, namely: Erecting telegraph and telephone lines, Hunt's Remedy now occupies the most honored place in my cabinet of medicines I would not be without it, and I cheerfully and heartily recommend it to all who are troubled with diseases of the liver, kidney, or urinary organs. It never fails to cure." 33 CENTRE STREET.

TOWN CLERK FORTY-TWO YEARS.

The following is from Mr. OTHNIEL GAGER, the well-known and respected Town Clerk of Norwich, Conn. Mr. Gager is 89 years old, and has held this position of trust for 42 years, and hie word is as good as his-bond. On May 5, 1833, he writes as follows: "For years I have suffered with disease of the kidneys and bladder, and have no hesitancy in recommending Hunt's Remedy as a specific for these complaints. It has not only been the means of relieving me of terrible pain, but has cured a number of my acquaintances. To-day I am performing the duties of the office of Town Clerk, which I have held for forty-two years, which I could not be able to do were I not in a fair state of health owing to the use of Hunt's Remedy."
